From The Director's Chair

I am pleased to report of a full year of HTMS program news in this edition of The Ledger.

In December, 2011 we graduated 23 Hospitality & Tourism Management students and another 36 in the Spring 2012 commencement ceremony. We are fortunate at Stockton to be experiencing growth, in both our program and the college overall. We celebrated the opening of our new campus center in May 2011 and many students have recently benefitted from this 154,000 square foot building designed to be a gathering place for our entire community. Home of several dining options, retail and meeting space, the campus center is a showcase for the college and home to many of our student services including admissions, financial aid, bursar, registrar, student development and academic advising. We also began to celebrate 40 years of teaching at Stockton with a ceremony, a book, and a commemorative film to highlight and celebrate our distinctive college history. <https://intraweb.stockton.edu/evos/page.cfm?siteID=219&pageID=5>

I hope that if you have not had an opportunity to visit the campus in a while that you will take some time to come visit soon.

The Hospitality & Tourism Management Studies program welcomed two new full time faculty members, Dr. Ivan Turnipseed and Dr. Joseph Lema, which you will read about in this issue of The Ledger. They have assimilated nicely and we look forward to their future contributions to our program.

Fall is always an active semester, as you will read about. Stockton's HTMS program was well represented at National Society of Minorities in Hospitality (NSMH) Northeast Regional Conference in Cherry Hill, NJ, at the Global Gaming Expo in Las Vegas, NV, at the International Hotel Motel Show in New York City, and at Cornell University in Ithaca, NY. In addition, the HTMS Society was active as usual, dining around and attending the NY Hotel Show. We also had a wonderful Alumni Panel on campus to talk to HTMS Students about preparing for the future.

We had two new electives offered this semester in our curriculum. The first was Introduction to Gaming Industry Management taught by Tom Olah. Tom is a former Casino Control Commission Regulator with an extensive background in Gaming Management. By utilizing his vast network of gaming professionals Tom was able to incorporate a series of guest speakers into the class in order to connect the theory taught to the gaming industry practice.

We hope this new elective has created a buzz and interest to our HTMS students and plan to offer this course again fall 2012.

The second new elective offered was Career Development – From Student to Professional. Pat Donahue, the Coordinator of Special Programs and Initiatives in Stockton's Career Center taught this course. This course focused on career skills for hospitality and tourism professionals, including job search strategies, writing resumes and cover letters, interviewing skills, and utilizing technology for network building. Pat also reached out to alumni and hospitality professionals to speak to the class in order to provide real life career development examples for the students to benefit from.

We look forward to expanding our elective offerings in the future with some additional curriculum changes in our program.

In the spring of 2012 the HTMS Program began the process of a 5 year program review designed to reflect on the past, present and future of the program. It addresses the ten overriding tenets of the program including:

- History, development and expectations of the program;
- Demand for the program as major;
- Demand for the program as a service program;
- Quality of program inputs and processes;
- Quality of program outcomes;
- Size, scope and productivity of the program;
- Revenue and other resources generated by the program;
- Costs and other expenses associated with the program;
- Impact, justification and overall essentiality of the program;
- Opportunity and threat analysis of the program

We hope this process will help us emerge a better and stronger program to meet the needs of internal and external constituents as we move forward.

We also look forward to welcoming another new faculty member in the fall of 2012. The HTMS faculty was actively engaged in an aggressive search process this semester and feels confident it will result in another strong candidate to join our team.

I wish you all a wonderful summer and look forward to reporting on all of next year's happenings in the Hospitality & Tourism Management Program at Stockton.

HTMS Students Study at Seaview

By Donna Albano

For the first time since Stockton took ownership of the Seaview Resort, the fall HTMS Cooperative Education class met weekly in the newly renovated space designated as classroom space in the hotel. Co-op meets once in a week for a four-hour seminar so it was the perfect class to place out at Seaview because it spans three teaching modules. Classrooms were eventually fully equipped with electronic teaching podiums, white boards and moveable tables and chairs. In addition, twenty five hotel rooms were occupied by Stockton students this semester as part of Stockton's residential life offerings. Seaview offered the HTMS students the opportunity to order food from their specially designated menu for the students that lived at Seaview. Speaking on behalf of the Co-op class it was a bonding experience for sure. Two Co-op classes were scheduled at Seaview for the Spring semester.

In September, the Richard Stockton College of New Jersey entered a cooperative agreement with the Cornell University School of Hotel Administration (SHA) for the mutual benefit of hospitality management students from both the institutions. The agreement enhances opportunities for students in the Stockton Hospitality and Tourism Management Studies (HTMS) program and SHA students in the Management Internship Program (MIP). Under its terms, Cornell students participating in internships in the Atlantic City area will have the opportunity for housing at Stockton's historic Seaview Resort. Additionally, Cornell students may enroll in Stockton HTMS or General Studies courses during their internship semesters. As part of the agreement, qualified Stockton students will have clear pathways for admission into Cornell's appropriate graduate programs. Dr. Donna Albano and Dr. Izzy Posner were hosted at Cornell University in November along with Executive in Residence, Andy Dolce in order to familiarize us with their academic program and structure of the Statler Hotel. We were afforded the opportunity to meet with faculty and students in their program. In addition we attended several workshops and symposiums and had the opportunity to guest lecture in their casino management elective course. This opportunity allowed us to solidify our relationship as we move forward to enable students to take advantage of the cooperative agreement recently signed by Stockton and Cornell.

Levenson Institute of Gaming, Hospitality & Tourism (LIGHT) attended and presented at the annual Global Gaming Expo (G2E) in Las Vegas, NV in October. The presentation, "Making the Transition: Morphing Gaming Into Hospitality" highlighted the growth of gaming on the east coast, the changing consumer demands and the unique strategy being used in New Jersey to create a tourism district in order to promote and market Atlantic City as a tourism destination.

G2E offers the world's largest and most comprehensive education for the gaming industry. Content is carefully developed by the industry for the industry by leading gaming experts. Those who attend G2E are all gaming industry employees—executives, corporate management, tribal leaders and buyers from all functional departments within a casino or gaming establishment; plus, other professionals working within or trying to work within the gaming industry.

HOSPITALITY & TOURISM MANAGEMENT

THE RICHARD STOCKTON COLLEGE OF NEW JERSEY

On Wednesday, November 16th, 2011 the HTMS program with support from the Stockton Alumni Association hosted an Alumni Speaker Panel. The event was held in the new campus center Board of Trustees room and was attended by the HTMS Co-op class along with three other HTMS classes. The seven esteemed alumni represented graduating classes from 2003 – 2010 and spoke to over 80 HTMS students. The alumni panel answered questions created by the current graduating seniors in the HTMS Co-op class. Questions included:

1. How did Stockton help you get to your career? How did having an Internship benefit you?
2. Upon graduation what was the most difficult obstacle to overcome and how did you deal?
3. After completing your degree, what do you think is more important education or work experience?
4. Do you think you left Stockton with strong networking connection? Locally, regionally, nationally?
5. Are you where you want to be in your career or do you want to keep moving?
6. What is most rewarding thing about your job?
7. Is there anything that you wish you could change about your education at Stockton?
8. How did you go about getting your job? What resources did you use?
9. What skills do you possess that set you apart from everyone else that applied for the job? What was your edge?

Senatorial Debate Senatorial Debate

By: Julia Damiani

On Monday October 17, 2011 a senatorial debate took place at the Circus Maximus Theater at Caesars, Atlantic City between incumbent Jim Whelan and his opponent Assemblyman Vince Polistina. The debate, sponsored by the Atlantic City Hotel & Lodging Association was dedicated to hospitality and tourism related issues. Both candidates did a good job holding to the subject matter, besides their opening and closing statements which both tried to take jabs at one another.

As a student I was asked to be on the panel to ask questions for both candidates to answer. The question would be posed to one candidate depending on the order who would have two minutes to answer the question and then the other candidate would have one minute to rebut the argument. As a student I felt it was important to ask questions that students in the hospitality industry are worried about. I asked the candidates with the way the economy has been going, if there was anything they were going to put in the legislation in order to create more jobs for students for when they graduate. Although both are very supportive of creating more jobs, neither one made me confident about fixing the employment situation in Atlantic City.

Another issue I found to be important to bring up is the perception of crime in Atlantic City, and how it would affect tourism in the city. With the recent crime reported in Atlantic City, I was curious how they were going to make the visitors feel comfortable. Both candidates found the safety of the visitors to be extremely important. Incumbent Jim Whelan mentioned getting rid of abandoned buildings, and how the development of "The Walk" was crucial to the development of Atlantic City. Assemblyman Vince Polistina talked highly about the police force and making sure violators are put into jail.

This was an experience not many people can say they have had in their life time. I felt like it was a growing experience. I have never been scared of public speaking, but it also has never been something I have enjoyed. This experience made public speaking in front of small group or class a breeze. I related it to running a full marathon, once you have ran a full marathon a half marathon is a breeze and you don't even think about it. The same goes for public speaking. It is an activity you need to keep experiencing and practicing until you feel comfortable.

This is my last semester at The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey, and in the beginning of my college career I never was very involved in school activities. By the time I hit my junior year of college I realized how enjoyable it is to get involved. It makes the college experience much more interesting, and you do not realize how much networking you are doing by just getting involved with the school. I never thought I would be part of a panel for a hot election, but it really opened my eyes to show me how much I have grown in the four years of my college career. Any advice I would give to college students is do not let fear drive you; make sure you try things you're scared of that way you can always allow yourself to grow.

My Experience at the International Hotel, Motel, and Restaurant Show

By: Joshua Kropkof

This past November, I had the unique opportunity to attend the International Hotel, Motel, and Restaurant Show (IHMRS) at the Javits Center in New York City. Aside from the excitement of getting to see the latest technology in the hospitality industry, I had the honor of meeting many executives from Fortune 500 companies as well as industry leaders and innovators along with students and faculty from hospitality schools around the country. It proved to be an incredibly fun, educational, and motivating experience.

The IHMRS was held for three days at the Javits Center in New York City. It brought industry leaders, executives, innovators, faculty, and students together to share in some of the latest developments in the world of hotels and restaurants, while also communicating invaluable knowledge and experience among the participants. When not helping at Stockton's exhibit booth, myself and the other students were allowed to walk around and explore the show. Spread out over an enormous area, there were displays and demonstrations from a huge variety of companies including restaurant equipment suppliers, cleaning equipment specialists, linen companies, and of course food and beverage vendors. There were also displays from college campuses and inventors of new products for use with restaurants and hotels. Some of the most interesting included automated cappuccino and espresso machines, automatic pouring nozzles for bottles of alcohol, ultra-fast cooking ovens, and even an anti-hangover energy drink. I tried samples of popcorn, frozen yogurt, soda, coffee, pretzels, bagels, bread, fish, steak, and much more. All of these had something unique about them and they were foods that for the most part had not yet been sold to the public.

As part of the program I also had the opportunity, along with other Stockton students to attend the Eta Sigma Delta breakfast meeting where we were introduced to other hospitality students from around the country, as well as executives from many hotel companies and leaders from hospitality programs at other schools. Not knowing what to expect, I was a little hesitant when we first arrived at the breakfast. Just as I was getting comfortable sitting at the table with other Stockton students and professors, it was announced that we would be moving around to other tables to meet new people. We were then instructed to move and sit with people we had never met before. At each table were one professor or executive, and about eight students. Each student at the table was allowed to ask a question of the professional, and participate in discussion. At each table I sat with during the two hour period, I found I was able to share my personal experience with the other participants, as well as learn a great deal from both the students and the professionals. This was mainly due to the fact that most tables did not follow the set "question and answer" structure, but instead allowed for open discussion regarding various aspects of the hospitality industry. It was very interesting to hear "industry stories" from different parts of the country, coming from both students and professionals. It gave me a unique perspective on the business of hospitality, and I even talked with a gentleman from Marriott who I discovered was friends with one of my coworkers at Borgata in Atlantic City.

The International Hotel, Motel, and Restaurant Show proved to be a fascinating experience. I initially had no idea what to expect, and was surprised to find out the convention had so much to offer. While I had a great time seeing, hearing about, and tasting some of the greatest new innovations in the industry, I felt that the best part of the experience was meeting people and learning from their stories. No matter what field you enter, classroom education can only teach you so much; we tend to learn the most from direct first-hand knowledge. This is especially true in a service-oriented industry such as hospitality. This is why I felt I learned the most just from talking with people at the convention, sharing my experiences with them while they shared theirs with me, and also sharing in the overall experience of attending such a fantastic event. It was not only fun and educational, but inspiring and motivational as well. It reminded me of why I want to be a part of this industry: to help create and share experiences.

Faculty Spotlights

Ivan B. Turnipseed, PhD, Assistant Professor of Hospitality & Tourism Management Studies, The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey. Born in Chicago, Illinois and reared on a family farm in rural Mississippi, Ivan attended Brandeis University in Waltham, MA on a full, four-year, Martin Luther King, Jr. Scholarship and earned a Bachelor of Arts in African & Afro-American Studies and American History. Later, he completed a Master of Science in Tourism and Travel Management plus a 30-credit Certificate of Advanced Study in Recreation Services and Resources Management from New York University. Ivan also holds a Doctor of Philosophy in Hospitality Administration from the University of Nevada, Las Vegas (UNLV).

For more than six years, Ivan worked in New York City as a group lodging coordinator and an operations manager with Travel Planners and its sister company Quikbook, respectively, before teaching hospitality and tourism for seven semesters at Monroe College in New Rochelle and The Bronx, New York. He later taught Women’s Studies at UNLV for four years in addition to developing and delivering the Afro-American Studies course Black Issues in Hospitality and Tourism plus teaching hotel college classes all while pursuing his PhD. More recently, Ivan taught business and hospitality as Frederick Douglass Teaching Scholar and Assistant Professor of Management at Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania in Bloomsburg. Immediately prior to Stockton, Ivan served as Assistant Professor and Interim Director of Tourism & Hospitality Studies in the Department of Geography at Central Connecticut State University in New Britain, CT.

A member of numerous professional associations and reviewer for several academic journals, Ivan is a passionate social commentator, researcher, and writer with scores of publications, presentations, and speaking engagements to his credit. He has maintained a presence at regional, national, and international educational and professional conferences, presenting on issues of gender, politics, race, research methods, service quality, and sustainability. Ivan regularly provides diversity, inclusion, general business, and other consultation, and he is Chief Advisor to the National Black Graduate Student Association as well as Assistant Director for Programs and Initiatives at The Center for African American Research and Policy.

Joseph Lema is an associate professor in the Hospitality and Tourism Management Studies program in the School of Business at the Richard Stockton College of New Jersey. He lectures, consults, and conducts research in the area of hospitality and tourism services. Lema serves on numerous editorial review boards along with memberships in leading hospitality and tourism industry associations.

Lema worked for Caesar’s Entertainment on the Mississippi Gulf Coast for 10 years before completing his doctoral studies in 2006 at The University of Southern Mississippi. Before joining the Hospitality and Tourism Management Studies at Stockton, he worked five years at Drexel University in Philadelphia.

Named a Fulbright Scholar to the Republic of Maldives from January to June, 2012 Lema is working in cooperation with the Maldives National University, The Ministry of Human Resources and The Ministry of Tourism Arts and Culture, along with the resort industry. Located in the Indian Ocean along the equator just south of Sri Lanka, the Maldives is made up of over 1190 islands with thousands of coral reefs along with some of the most exotic resorts in the world. The Fulbright grant is made possible by the J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarship Board, a Presidentially appointed 12-member board responsible for establishing worldwide policies for the Fulbright program along with The Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs of the U.S. State Department who oversees the operations of the program.

Scholarships!

Spring semester is always busy with scholarship applications and award ceremonies, planning for Eta Sigma Delta, the HTMS Honor Society Induction Ceremony, and Dr. Scales Special Events Management class annual dinner fundraiser, summer job searches and of course graduation.

This spring 4 HTMS students were awarded scholarships from the Greater Atlantic City Concierge Association. These students are invited the Atlantic City Host Awards Ceremony on May 9th, at the Atlantic City Convention Center to publically receive their awards.

Amanda Fritz, Richard Stockton College $1000
Stephanie Sierra, Richard Stockton College $500
Patrick Rafferty, Richard Stockton College $2000
Torie Elizabeth Stevenson $1000

In addition, 4 HTMS students were awarded Atlantic City Hotel & Lodging Association scholarships and were invited to their scholarship luncheon on Tuesday, April 17 at the Tropicana to publically receive their awards.

Eta Sigma Delta

Twenty eight Hospitality and Tourism Management students were inducted into Eta Sigma Delta, The International Hospitality Management Honor Society on Sunday April 22. Guest Speaker and Honorary Inductee Doreen Prinzo spoke to the students about the opportunities in front of them and how to be flexible in an ever changing world. Prinzo who is Manager, Marketing Partnership with the Atlantic City Convention & Visitors Authority was unanimously selected by the faculty to be the guest speaker for this candle lighting ceremony. Dean Janet Wagner also spoke to these students, who are required to maintain a 3.0 grade point average, have completed 64 credits towards the Hospitality and Tourism Management degree, and provide community service, explaining that the “inductees were the type of students that did not sleep in and dream their dreams, they were the type that woke up and worked hard toward their dreams.” Andrea Giannini, Eta Sigma Delta President, helped organize the event along with Professor Albano.

Stockton Students Learn Service Through Charity Dinner

In April the Events Planning and Catering Management class held a charity dinner to raise money for The Alcove, Center for Grieving Children and Families. The dinner is a culmination of a semester long service learning project for the class. The students begin the semester by choosing a theme-the theme for this year was An Evening on the Red Carpet, then the menu, décor, marketing strategy, and scheduling. Each student has a hands-on experience leading up to and including the event. Many in the Stockton community gave generously in the form of financial donation while others came out for the meal which was provided by Chartwells and served by the students. This class was able to raise and donate over $2,500 to The Alcove (thealcove.org). Professor Scales' students also acted as Student Ambassadors during the Stockton Scholarship Gala at Borgata this year.

Alumni Profile

Amy Smith

Amy Smith is a 2008 graduate of Hotel and Tourism Management. While at Stockton, Amy was a member of Eta Sigma Delta, the International Hospitality Management Honor Society, served on Stockton's Chapter of the National Panhellenic Council, and was President of Alpha Gamma Delta National Fraternity. She spent her senior semester as an intern with Caesar's Entertainment, Inc, working in spa operations at Qua Spa.

"...every opportunity to work
is an opportunity to learn..."

Upon graduation, Amy spent two months working in the Caribbean for Student City Tours. There she worked as an on site representative for the company, coordinating with small hotels and travelers ensuring a safe travel experience. She then went to Bally's Casino and Hotel in Atlantic City as a VIP Service Specialist where she learned the basics of front desk operations and VIP guest services area of the casino. In April 2010, Amy accepted a position for Starwood Hotels Worldwide at the W Hotel in Washington, DC as a night auditor, transitioned to a daytime front desk agent and often times would assist in other departments such as housekeeping and in-room dining. In August 2011, Amy was promoted into Revenue Management, working under the Director of Revenue Management. Amy stated that every opportunity to work is an opportunity to learn, hard work will not go unnoticed.
