Atlantic City, NJ – The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey’s William J. Hughes Center for Public Policy will host a talk featuring U.S. Attorney Chris Christie and NJ Attorney General Anne Milgram. The pair will discuss human trafficking in a panel that will be moderated by NJN’s Kent Manahan, followed by a question-and-answer session.

Human trafficking is modern day slavery. According to the United States Department of State, there are estimated to be between 15,000 and 18,000 human trafficking victims in the U.S. and up to two million people are sold worldwide every year.

Admission to this event is by invitation only and the lecture will take place on Wednesday, August 20 at 7 p.m. at Stockton’s Carnegie Library Center on Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Blvd. and Pacific Avenue in Atlantic City.

NOTE TO EDITORS: Although this event is not open to the general public, your coverage is invited. For more information contact the Hughes Center at (609) 626-3542 or e-mail martha.mcginis@stockton.edu.
