“Stockton University, the Hughes Center and ultimately, the citizens of New Jersey will benefit from the advice and counsel of such an incredible array of nationally recognized experts in government, law, civic engagement and public policy,” said President Herman Saatkamp.

The William J. Hughes Center for Public Policy promotes the civic life of our community through engagement, education and research. Since 2008, the Hughes Center has expanded and enhanced its programming to include: Legislator-in-Residence, Congress-to-Campus, civic education with iCivics, Hughes Center Honors, Washington Internship Program Scholarships, Higher Education Strategic Information and Governance (HESIG), the Stockton Polling Institute, along with debates, symposia, lectures, panel discussions, and, now, the National Advisory Board.

“Our roots are always in South Jersey, even as we receive more regional and national attention for our work,” stated Ambassador William J. Hughes, the namesake of the Hughes Center.

“The National Advisory Board will help broaden the perspective of the center by bringing more points of view and experience to the table,” said Hughes.
