Galloway, NJ - Watch a salsa dancing demonstration - or even get an individual lesson - at Stockton University's Kramer Hall on Thursday, Aug. 20, part of Hammonton, NJ's Third Thursday Latin Night events.

For the third year in a row, Stockton's Dr. Tait Chirenje, associate professor of Environmental Studies, will give salsa dance demonstration as well as individual dance lessons. He will be accompanied by his longtime dance partner and friend, Betty Acetti.

Chirenje has been dancing for about seven years now and performs on occasion. His current favorites are salsa, which started in Cuba and Puerto Rico, bachata from the Dominican Republic and Kizomba, which originated in Angola.

"I love dancing. It's good exercise and even better therapy," he said.

The free, public event will take place from 6 - 8 p.m. at the Kramer Hall instructional site, 30 Front St. in downtown Hammonton.
