Galloway Twp., NJ – The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey's Hughes Center for Public Policy will be hosting a U.S. Senate Republican debate in collaboration with the Press of Atlantic City.

Set to take place this Thursday night, May 22nd, the Republican candidates for U.S. Senate have agreed to a debate being co-hosted by the Hughes Center and the Atlantic City Press. To date, this is the only debate being held in South Jersey.

This free and open-to-the-public debate will take place at the Townsend Residential Life Center of the Galloway Township campus at 7 p.m. Members of the media and the public are invited to attend. For event details and additional information, please call the Hughes Center at (609) 626-3542.

The Hughes Center for Public Policy is a catalyst for research, analysis and the generation of innovative policy solutions to the social, economic and cultural issues facing Southern New Jersey. The Center serves as a forum for discussion on policy issues designed to engage citizens and policy makers in strengthening the voice of Southern New Jersey in public policy discussions. For more information about the Hughes Center, please see the Center's Web site for information at www.stockton.edu/hughescenter.
