

“Breaking Bread” Event in Hammonton, Nov. 20

History of Bread and its World Culture to Be Explored

For Immediate Release

Monday, November 12, 2012

Contact: Tim Kelly
Office of Public Relations
Galloway Township, NJ 08240
Tim.Kelly@stockton.edu
(609) 652-4950

Hammonton, NJ- Just in time for Thanksgiving, the Stockton College community seminar series “Foodie Tuesdays” continues this month with “Breaking Bread: Breads, History and World Culture.” The Tuesday, November 20 seminar starts at 6 p.m. and will take place at the Hammonton Art Center, 219 Bellevue Avenue in Hammonton.

The event will explore the history, cultural, religious, and health aspects of many different kinds of breads. Anthony Dissen, a Registered Dietician, will lead seminar participants in the exploration of this subject, after which all participants will enjoy light dining at Annata Wine Bar, directly across the street from the Arts Center.

Registration for the seminar, discussion and dining is $35 per person. If participants register with a friend, the cost is only $30 a person.

Registration is limited and the October seminar sold out early. Reservations are strongly recommended. Call Stockton College’s Continuing Studies office to reserve a seat, 609-652-4227, or register online at www.stockton.edu/cs, then go to “Browse All Courses”.

#