

“Spicing Up Celebrations: The Chemistry and Culture of Flavors” Event in Hammonton on December 18

For Immediate Release

Friday, November 30, 2012

Contact: Tim Kelly
Office of Public Relations
Galloway Township, NJ 08240
Tim.Kelly@stockton.edu
(609) 652-4950

Hammonton, NJ – Richard Stockton College’s “Foodie Tuesdays” community seminar series concludes for the semester at 6 p.m. on Tuesday December 18, at the Hammonton Arts Center, 219 Bellevue Avenue in downtown Hammonton.

This month’s event, “Spicing Up Celebrations: The Chemistry and Culture of Flavors” explores the history of spice usage, including the religious and cultural practices connected with spice trade and use through the centuries. Attendees will also learn ways to spice up the holidays in new ways with their own cooking, and to experiment with different flavors from cultures around the world.

Following the seminar and discussion portion of the event, participants will enjoy a light dinner related to the topic at Annata’s Wine Bar, located a short walk from the Arts Center. Registration is $35 per person. If participants register with a friend, the cost is only $30 a person.

Registration is limited and previous seminars sold out well in advance. Reservations are strongly encouraged. Call Stockton College’s Continuing Studies office to reserve a seat, 609-652-4227, or register online at www.stockton.edu/cs and select “Browse All Courses.”

# #